ington, ready with six thousand men to make a dash on the seat of government.

But it is important, in reference to English interests, to consider the effect which this unhappy contest is likely to produce upon neutral commerce. Mr. Jefferson Duvir, the President of the new contederation, has announced his intention of granting letters of marque. Mr. Lincoln has met this threat by declaring a blockade of the Southern ports, and by stating that he will treat as pirates all privateers commissioned by the insurgent States. In these circumstances no one can be surprised that the British Foreign Michier should be required to explain the course which the government is prepared to pursue. The question, no doubt, will be discussed in its important bearings when Mr. Horsfall's motion comes before the House, out last night Lord John Russell, in answer to Mr. Gregory, made a statement which is worthy of serious and grave attention. We do not alluce to the levying of federal dues on shiphasid, a case which must be decided, when it artises, upon the universally admuted principles of international law, but the declaration made by the noble lord that the government had come to the conclusion that "the Southern States of American ust be treated as beligerents." The noble lord based this determination upon the policy which this country pursued in 1826, when Greece was engaged in insurrection sgamat Turkey. If the noble lord had referred to American jurists, Mr. Justice Storey, had laid down precisely the same role. That learned Judge, in the case of the Santisama Trinidad (7 Wheston), decided that during the continuance of the civil war between Spain and her colonies, and previous to the acknowledgment of the independence of the latter by the mother country, "the colonies were bell gerent nations, and entitled to all the sovereign lights of war against the enemy." The his country. The federal government, therefore, cannot justly take offence by the mother country, if the colonies have asserted from their first constitution shou ition of those great principles of public law which subsist for the benefit of the world at large.

[From the London Times, May S.]

America's present position is one which she never could nave foreseen, and never contemplated; it is the direct contrary of all that she has ever marked out for therself, and she has consequently been in unstriously vindicating principles and making precedents, all of which will now go to the contraction of her own beligerant rights. She has saved from prishing the vile trade of privateering, and the existence of privateers scattered over every sea will necessitate the dividing her fleet in order to protect her commerce. She has stretched the rights of neutrals to resistance of the once conceded right of scarch and visit, and she has therby given us immunity for every character of goods which we may carry in our free natural ships. She has even, we believe, gone further than this. If we mistake not she in a very recent case of an American ship sear d by Napolitian cruisers off Sicily raised and insisted that a State cannot blocked its own ports. We speak from impression, and not from reference, but we believe we are correct in saving that the United States demanded and obtained restitution and compensation from the King of Naples, upon the ground that, as he claimed Sicily as part of his domainons—just as Mr. Lincoln new claims the seceeded States—he could not have to deal with a people who have always been the champions of the rights of neutrals, and who will have to deal with a people who have always been the champions of the rights of neutrals, and who will have to discust which we shall have to lay before them.

The Commissioners from the Confederate States in London—tteported Interview with Lord John Russell. [London (May 6) Correspondence of Manchester Guardian]

The American news occupies all minds, and is the subject of clasussion in all societies. As I said in my tast letter, the American citizens whom one meets, as a rule, express their satisfaction that the matter has come to an issue. The general expectation among those who beat know the States appears to be a confident one in the utilimate triumph of the North, but in all probability after partial successes of the Southern Confederation at first starting. The Commissioners of the Confederation are there, ledged—two, if not all of them—in St. James street. They have, I believe, already had communication with Lord John Russell.

Another eminent American now here is Colonel Fremont. His view of the state of things is said to be very gleony. He anticipates a bloody and obstinate struggle, with parts?. negro insurrections, whenever a favorable oppertunity occurs. The que-tion of letters of marque is vehemently discussed. Doubts are expressed whether the North cas, in accordance with civilised usages, hang privateers under Lavis' letters as pirates, especially with the certainty of bloody retailation by the Southerners. The templation of the California guld ships is felt to be normous; and the impossibility of preventing privateers from taking the sea by means of blockade is at once admitted, seeing that there is no reason why such privateers should not issue from the torts of the United Kingdom, as seed as these of the Southern seaboard.

Gold from California for London.

[From the London Times, May 7.]
It is stated that policies of insuranne are now being pened here for £1,000,000 of California bullion from Fanama to London, these consignments being diverted from New York in consequence of the peril of capture. It is likewise mentioned, in further corroboration of the arguments regarding the adverse effect which must be produced in the American money markets by the occurrence of actual war, that some moderate sums are already in course of remittance to this country to be lodged at the current rate of interest for deposits.

Jefferson Davis' Letters of Marque in

[From the London Economist, May 4]

The recent events in America have given rise to a very curious event. We have very often called the attention of our readers to the laws of maritime warfare. We have personnelled the attention of our readers to the laws of maritime warfare. We have personnelled out how taverable they were to axions which were generally neutral in times of war, we have shown how much, as America was always presumably neutral, they operated in her favor. And such were the fair probabilities, the plain conclusions of very aimpie reasoning. But what has been the result! In fact, the Notthern States of America, the shipping States, are at his moment suffering very materially from the usages of warfare; those who are expected to beach have been the first to suffer. The position of the Southern States was in many respects a peculiar one; but in no respect was it more peculiar than a thistoning possessed of a very long line of sea coast they have not the vertige of a navy; not a single arms dvessel belonging to any of them. They were wholly unable, therefore, to provide for the now imminent contingency of a maritime war with the North in what we hold now-adys la Europe to be the regular and legitimate way, and are criven to what we deem an exceptional and unjustifiable course As they had no navy, they issued "latters of marque," which will empower any incividual to fit out a privater with which he can account the two what we been an acceptional and unjustifiable course of marque, which will empower any incividual to fit out a privater with which he can account the tention of the mercantile navy, and in some small measure carry on a maritime warfare with the North. The effect has been namediate, and would have been at a great disadeandaye. They can be attacked in all quarters, and especially near house, by auch privateers as any individual associates of Mr. lefterson Davis may think it expotent to fit out and maintain. These may not, perhaps, for the moment, be very many, but sill there is a risk for
